

recrimination

[rɪˌkrɪmɪˈneɪʃ(ə)n] n

- 1) взаимные обвинения; взаимные упрёки
to engage in recrimination - бросать друг другу обвинения, упрекать друг друга
- 2) юр. встречное обвинение

recrimination

Oxford Advanced Learners Dictionary 8th Ed.

re·crim·in·ation [recrimination recriminations] BrE [rɪˌkrɪmɪˈneɪʃn] AmE

[rɪˌkrɪmɪˈneɪʃn] noun countable, usually plural, uncountable

an angry statement that sb makes accusing sb else of sth, especially in response to a similar statement from them

- bitter recriminations
- We spent the rest of the evening in mutual recrimination.

Derived Word ↑ recriminatory

Word Origin:

early 17th cent.: from French récrimination or medieval Latin recriminatio(n-), from recriminare 'accuse mutually', from re- (expressing opposition) + criminare 'accuse' (from crimen 'crime').

recrimination

Longman DOCE 5th Ed. (En-En)

re·crim·i·na·tion /rɪˌkrɪməˈneɪʃən, rɪˌkrɪmɪˈneɪʃən/ BrE AmE noun [countable usually plural, uncountable]

[Date: 1600-1700; Language: Medieval Latin; Origin: recriminatio, from recriminare, from Latin criminari 'to accuse']

when you blame or criticize someone for something that has happened:

Bitter accusations and recriminations followed the disaster.

recrimination

Freakuency Pack

12500 11547^{MCW}

15000 11880^{COCA}

RANGE: 8k RECRIMINATION⁴¹⁹

recrimination ¹⁵⁵

recriminations ²⁶⁴

COCA 500k Unlemmatized

149 60490¹⁵⁵ nn1