hose

hose [hose hoses hosed hosing] noun, verb BrE [həʊz] ^o NAmE [hoʊz] ^o

1. (also hose-pipe BrE [ˈhəʊzpaɪp] ^o ; NAmE [ˈhoʊzpaɪp] ^o) countable, uncountable (BrE) a long tube made of rubber, plastic, etc, used for putting water onto fires, gardens, etc
 - a garden hose
 - a length of hose

see also ↑fire hose
2. plural = ↑hosiery
3. plural trousers/pants that fit tightly over the legs, worn by men in the past
 - doublet and hose

Word Origin:

Old English hosa, of Germanic origin; related to Dutch hoos ‘stocking, water hose’ and German Hosen ‘trousers’. Originally singular, the term denoted a covering for the leg, sometimes including the foot but sometimes reaching only to the ankle.

Example Bank:

- The firefighters trained their hoses on the burning building.
- You need a fire hose; a garden hose isn't powerful enough to tackle a fire.
- a fire/garden hose

Derived ↑hose something down verb ~ sth

to wash or pour water on sth using a ↑hose

- Firemen hosed the burning car.
