Word Origin:

early 16th cent. (denoting a shaft of a barrow, also a car used in coal mines): from Middle Low German and Middle Dutch trame 'beam, barrow shaft'. In the early 19th cent, the word denoted the parallel wheel tracks used in a mine, on which the public tramway was modelled; hence the current sense (late 19th cent.).

Example Bank:

- The last tram ran through Glasgow in September 1962.
- There is easy access to the centre of the city by tram.
